With their geometric shapes, obsessively clean lines and knock-out colors, Halley paintings resemble blow-ups of circuit boards. Like sharp-edged Rothkos, they express emotion using only shape and color. If you want to see more, Halley also has a large installation at Lever House on Park Avenue through the end of this year. Go: Sperone Westwater, 257 Bowery, www.speronewestwater.com. Through Dec. 22.
