ARTSY

Here, we spotlight 15 of the exhibitions that we're most excited to see this month, from the first museum solo show of Toyin Ojih Odutola to the New Museum's intergenerational exploration of gender, to a mad retrospective from a former New Yorker now based in Bali.

While his reputation is forever linked to touching, comedic portraits that humanize Weimaraners, Wegman's career actually contains multitudes: video and conceptual experiments, drawings, and paintings that incorporate collaged postcards. While a handful of recent shows in New York have explored those lesser-known facets, this time it's all about the dogs, with around three decades of never-before-exhibited 20x24 Polaroids of the artist's famous canines. —SI
